Educating Jane: My step, His Wife, and Me K. Spirit

That noise! That annoying squeaking noise which on most nights wakes me up is once again in my head. My eyes spring forward bleary but I am able to see the clock. Twelve midnight on the dot, it seemed like clockwork in all sense of the word that it happened at this time.

I had done this before, many nights, waking up angry and upset but giving up and going back to sleep.

Tonight is different however, I have a big test tomorrow, one that will determine if I fail my college class and the last thing I need is this. Pulling myself from my bed I step from my room tracing the sound as I walk. I need not worry too much about where it is coming from, that mystery had been solved about a week ago. It was Phil and his wife Denise and from what I could tell that night as I leaned my ear against the door was that they were having a good time.

This little brat is tired of being woken up every night and tonight I am determined to put a stop to it one way or the other. If it was their wish for me to hear them in their raw moments of pleasure then I would let them know I could watch as well. Little did I know as I swung the door open I would realize that I may have bitten off more than I can swallow
