This evangelistic work for the youthful reader by Silas K. Hocking (1850-1935) is about two waifs, Benny and his younger sister Nelly. They flee an abusive father and take to the streets of Liverpool to provide the meager necessities of life. Nelly has a weak constitution and Benny considers a life of crime as a means to alleviate their suffering. This road, however, goes against his conscience and he promises his sister to always be honest. Her Benny is a tale filled with numerous trials and tribulations.
