2010 Hidden Curriculum One-a-day Calendar for Kids: Items for Understanding Unstated Rules in Social Situations Blackwell Family

"The 2010 Hidden Curriculum Calendar for Kids" is full of helpful advice that touches on all aspects of growing up - at home, at school, and in the community. Written by the Blackwell family, which includes two members on the autism spectrum, many of the calendar items are based on their experiences in daily life, and include such areas as texting, working in groups, friendship, sibling rivalry, understanding commonly used idioms, and much more. Parents and teachers alike will love the ease with which the entries spur conversations about the countless 'unwritten social rules' that we encounter every day and that can cause confusion and anxiety.
